Drucker Labs Shares in Foundation for Chiropractic Progress Mission for Positive Press

Carmichael, California - March 17, 2010 — Drucker Labs (www.druckerlabs.com), a leading manufacturer of carbon-bond liquid nutritional therapy solutions, has recently pledged $12,000 to the Foundation for Chiropractic Progress (www.f4cp.com), a not-for-profit organization with the sole mission of generating positive press for the chiropractic profession. Drucker Labs joins the Foundation as a Bronze class Progress Partner, a contributing level that requires a donation of at least $10,000 per year.

"Drucker Labs is delighted to support the Foundation for Chiropractic Progress, and we believe that every company serving the chiropractic profession should join us in this effort," states Tina Drucker, marketing manager for Drucker Labs.

After taking notice of the Foundation's high profile campaigns -- including the Washington D.C. media blitz on health care reform and the ongoing State-2-State ad campaign -- Drucker Labs recognized the importance of assisting the not-for-profit in its public awareness campaigns.

"It is clear that the Foundation is making incredible strides for the chiropractic profession, and we are proud to be one of the many companies helping to fuel their initiatives," concludes Drucker.

About Drucker Labs

Drucker Labs is a leading manufacturer of carbon-bond, liquid nutritional therapy solutions sold exclusively through health care professionals. Using a revolutionary and proprietary process known as intraCELL V Technology™, Drucker Labs produces the most advanced liquid nutritional therapy solution available: intraMAX®. Each bottle of intraMAX is produced using a 40-day, cold-fill process and includes a complete daily allowance of vital nutrients, minerals, vitamins, fruits and vegetables. Each ingredient is carbon-bonded to allow for maximum and efficient absorption and detoxification of inorganic materials in the body.

About F4CP
